Mike Corum

Artist Mike Corum interprets the world around him in abstract form and portrays that in bold colors, playful movement, and tight brush strokes and lines. Mike says, "I always become excited when someone connects with my paintings. I enjoy immensely hearing people explain what they see in my works. Everybody sees something unique, and everybody is right. That is a joyful experience and a great reward in itself." Influenced by the works of Keith Haring, Roy Lichtenstein, Roger Brown, Piet Mondrian, and tangentially by Andy Goldsworthy and Jaume Plensa, more recently, vibrant street artists including Banksy, Nick Walker, Above, and Shepard Fairey, Mike feels that street art is a movement that makes art more accessible to the general population. An Iowa native, after graduating from Coe College and Drake University, Mike settled in Pella where he lives with his wife and their two dogs, five cats, and one fish. Their three children make their livings in the art world as printmakers, photographers, and ceramicists. Mike considers himself fortunate to have traveled to every continent on the globe except Antarctica, but he's not done yet.
